Investment update

Markets rebounded in April after a temporary ceasefire between the US and Iran eased concerns over disruption in the Strait of Hormuz. Earlier tensions had pushed Brent oil above USD 100 a barrel and triggered sharp volatility, but sentiment improved once the ceasefire was announced, despite ongoing geopolitical uncertainty. US equities led the recovery, supported by renewed enthusiasm around AI and technology. The S&P 500 rose 10.5% and the Nasdaq gained 15.3%, with semiconductor stocks performing particularly strongly. European and Asian markets also moved higher, although gains were more modest as elevated energy prices weighed on the outlook. Central banks including the Fed, BoE and ECB kept interest rates unchanged, though inflation concerns linked to energy prices remain. UK gilt yields rose above 5% for the first time since 2008 amid political uncertainty ahead of local elections.

Performance is not an indicator of future returns

As per the Prospectus, the fund has the legal ability to have an annual management charge (AMC) of up to 0.35%, however, a cost cap has been agreed with the ACD so that the total fund charge (including AMC) is 0.34%. MPE and the ACD have put this cost cap in place for the benefit of our clients. This means that although the fund has the ability to charge up to 0.35% plus other fund related expenses, the actual total cost is limited to 0.34% to ensure the funds remain suitable for investors.

This performance data represents simulated past performance of the fund and is not based on actual trading results. Unlike an actual performance record, simulated results do not represent actual trading and may not reflect the impact of material economic and market factors on the decision-making process. Simulated past performance is not indicative of future results. There is no guarantee that the fund will achieve similar performance in the future. The performance data is net of investment charges (not management, ACD) but does not account for all factors that could impact the actual performance.

My Pension Expert has elected to present simulated past performance rather than actual historical performance for the Imperium funds. As the sponsor of the funds, My Pension Expert has mandated LGT to restructure the portfolios from their previous asset allocation to a predominantly passive investment approach, complemented by a small allocation to direct holdings. This transition is currently underway and will be completed by May 2026. As a result of this change, historical performance based on the former fund structure is no longer representative and would be potentially misleading. The simulated performance therefore illustrates how the Imperium funds would have performed over the past five years had the target passive investment structure been in place throughout that period.

Simulated Past Performance: The performance data presented herein represents simulated past performance of the fund and is not based on actual trading results. Unlike an actual performance record, simulated results do not represent actual trading and may not reflect the impact of material economic and market factors on the decision-making process. The simulated performance does not account for all factors that could impact actual performance such as transaction costs, liquidity constraints and other market factors. Simulated past performance is not indicative of future results and is based on certain assumptions and models that may not be accurate or applicable in all market conditions. Investing in financial markets involves risk, including the potential loss of the amount invested. Past performance, whether simulated or actual, does not guarantee future results. Past performance should not be used to predict future performance. Capital is at risk.
